Normalization and Tougher Comparables

Welcome to Modern Distribution Management’s 2024 Top Distributors feature, now in its 15th year. Here, you’ll find our rankings of North America’s largest distributors of industrial, commercial and building supply products, based on their 2023 fiscal revenue within 20 different industry verticals. More than 200 different companies are represented across these various lists.

It’s MDM’s biggest research project of the year.

Before you dive into our rankings in the pages ahead, let’s set the stage for the key factors that shaped this year’s feature and key context you should know when perusing our lists.

2023: Strong Start, Late Fade

Since our lists are based purely on 2023 fiscal revenues for all distributors, that year is worth examining from a high level.

After riding the inflation wave in 2021 and 2022, distributors found 2023 to be less advantageous from an economic tailwind perspective. While inflation persisted throughout 2023 and has since, it leveled out throughout the year and led to far tougher year-over-year financial comparables. Meanwhile, publicly-traded distributors began to mention demand softening as early as 1Q23 quarterly earnings reports, with that ramping up as the year progressed.

Disinflation and lower volumes resulted in the U.S. wholesale distribution sector finishing with 2023 annual revenues of $7.887 trillion, according to the MDM Forecast, which strips out agents and brokers, manufacturers’ sales branches and offices, importers and exporters. That was down 1.8% after soaring 14.8% and 20.5% in 2022 and 2021, respectively.

Year	U.S. WD Revenue	Annual Change
2021	$5.561 Trillion	-4.50%
2022	$6.996 Trillion	20.50%
2023	$8.031 Trillion	14.80%
2024	$7.887 Trillion	-1.80%

But, it’s important to keep in mind the context that while 2023 was a downstep in overall revenue, that was compared to a record-setting and inflated previous two years. Far removed from direct impacts from the COVID-19 pandemic, 2023 may be remembered as the first ‘normal’ year since 2019 in terms of supply chain conditions and escalating inflation.

The vast majority of the distributors on our lists posted modest annual sales gains or declines in 2023, while pockets of others outperformed their competition or were hit hard by market-specific factors. That’s continued through the first half of 2024, with firms still facing tough comps vs. the first and second quarters of a year earlier.

Industry-Specific Revenue

Like for the past several years, this is the most important part of this introduction. Starting in 2022, MDM put a heightened emphasis on ranking companies by their sector-specific revenues rather than total revenue.

This also explains why you’ll see some distributors with smaller total revenues ranked higher than others within the same industry.

Take Grainger, for example. By its total 2023 revenue of $16.5 billion, Grainger is North America’s largest industrial supplies distributor. But when digging into its financial reports and product sector breakouts, we find that it’s also one of North America’s top distributors of electrical, HVACR, plumbing, power transmission, fluid power and safety products. This is why Grainger ended up appearing on 10 of our 20 sector lists — the company’s revenue within each of those segments is large enough to warrant a spot. And this is why Watsco is ranked No. 1 in HVACR and Grainger is No. 5 despite Watsco’s $7.3 billion in 2023 revenue being much smaller than Grainger’s $16.5 billion — Watsco’s HVACR revenue was much higher than Grainger’s.

This explains why you’ll find some companies charted on industry lists outside of their “core” offering. For example, Graybar is best known as an electrical products distributor, but its industrial products sales were large enough to chart at No. 20 on our Industrial Supplies list. It’s also why Ferguson appears on our lists for Industrial Supplies, Building Materials/Construction and Safety, besides its hallmarks of Plumbing, HVACR and Industrial PVE.

But while our rankings are based on 2023 revenue within each sector, the revenue you see displayed on our lists is overall revenue. Why? Quite simply, while many privately-owned distributors elected not to publicly share their total revenues, far fewer still elected not to publicly share their sector-specific revenues. If we displayed the sector-specific revenues of those that gave us the OK to, they’d be few and far between. The overall revenue figure gives us something to show for the majority of companies on our lists.

That sector-specific revenue breakout is the most painstaking part of our research process, as it involves an incredible amount of hair-splitting and triangulation to find accurate revenues. It makes this feature all the more challenging, but we do it because it results in a more accurate list and levels the playing field.

distribution sales, services and logistics.

Our Research Process & Methodology

MDM's Top Distributors Lists were based on 2023 fiscal revenues within industry sectors, either reported or estimated by MDM's editorial team and sector validators. For distributors that don't follow a January-December fiscal calendar, we've noted that with an asterisk and a footnote. To normalize the way we display the rankings, we include total company revenues, rather than break out individual sector revenues. Companies were asked to provide data about revenues, with information supplemented by quarterly fiscal reports, SEC filings and publicly available information. For companies that elect to not share revenue data, MDM estimates their relative position in its sector list based on the best available industry resources and information.

Note: Companies that operate primarily as master distributors are not eligible for Top Distributors inclusion.

3 New List Segments

With the support from MDM's integration into the National Association of Wholesaler-Distributors, we were able to add three list categories to our feature — Pharmaceuticals & Healthcare, Food & Beverage and Lubricants & Fuels. This expansion helps our feature represent even more of the wholesale distribution industry.

Where's Amazon Business?

MDM readers who have regularly seen our Top Distributors lists over the years may notice that we don't include the industry's biggest elephant in the room: Amazon Business. The B2B supplies marketplace appeared in the top six of our Industrial Supplies list since first appearing in 2018, including at No. 2 in 2022. While the platform is certainly competing directly with industrial, commercial and building supply distributors for market share to a tune of $35 billion in 2022 revenue, we made the decision last year to omit it from our lists due to Amazon Business' very unique business model. It was the only company on our lists in previous years that couldn't be described as a distributor. We do, however, include The Home Depot's Pro segment, which directly operates via

To Keep in Mind

As you peruse the rankings across these different verticals, it's important to remember that the way we put them together is not an exact science. While our editorial team made every effort to extract revenue information from the non-publicly-traded distributors listed here, many companies are understandably private with that information. We are happy to keep that revenue information strictly private and only use it internally for rankings, which an increasing number of companies opt for each year. So, when you see "N/A" listed for revenue, that likely means that revenue figure was confidentially given to MDM and to not be published.

Even with that understanding, a smaller number of companies would rather not budge on sharing their revenue. Given the amount of large distributors that have been privately-acquired in recent years, this isn't a surprise. In these cases where revenue isn't shared, our team triangulates with respected industry experts and the best available information to estimate and rank distributors appropriately.

Another nugget to note is that since we used fiscal 2023 revenues for all companies, the revenues of handful of companies that don't follow a traditional 12-month fiscal calendar represent a time difference by as much as nine months. We've denoted distributors that don't follow a traditional fiscal calendar with an asterisk next to their revenue and a footnote.

Questions? Comments?

As alluded to above, there is no perfect way to conduct these rankings. I'm sure there are MDM readers who will disagree with where and how certain companies are slotted on our list, and that's OK, especially given our focus on sector-specific revenue. I'm very open to comments and suggestions for how we can improve this feature going forward. Don't hesitate to reach out.

While there is considerable overlap between MDM's verticals for industrial supplies and MRO industrial, we consider there to be enough nuance specific to MRO to warrant breaking out its own Top Distributors list. While every MRO product may be considered an industrial product, the opposite isn't always true. For MDM, MRO products are those needed to keep a company's facilities and production processes running smoothly, whereas industrial products encompass MRO in addition to products involved in the manufacturing process and/or components used in the final product.
